

Name: Shrey Shah

UIN: 664406225

Email Id: sshah023@illinois.edu

IS 445 - Data Visualization - Weekly Report 7

The above visualization is relevant in recent times and shows us how the different currencies in the world have been suffering stiff competition against the US dollar. It shows us the percentage change in the currency rates from December 2021 to July 2022.

One thing I like about this graph, is that it is simple to understand because the reference line starts at 0 and goes down in the negative y-axis, indicating a drop. Along with a drop in percentage, it gives us an idea of the time dimension and gives us the approximate drop in currency prices over the entire duration.

The thing that is absurd in this graph is that some arrows and countries have been shown in brown or black while others are fading to a light gray. This makes certain portions inaccessible to the naked eye. Also, the font size of the text is large, which is overlapping and making it more difficult to read in gray areas.

References:

The dollar is extremely strong, pushing down the world - news-universe. News. (2022, July 16). Retrieved October 10, 2022, from <https://news-universe.com/2022/07/16/the-dollar-is-extremely-strong-pushing-down-the-world/>